In his dilemma, it is left for Wallace Batchelder to form a new party within the new party.

The Quincy granite manufacturers have set August 3 as the date for their annual outing. Doubtless, the Barre manufacturers have not overlooked this feature of their organization life.

Now that a law has become effective in Kentucky by which women are entitled to vote in school meetings, it is to be hoped that the women will take more advantage of it than Vermont women do of a similar right.

The seventy-five cents which Harland R. Howe confesses he spent campaigning prior to the convention which nominated him for governor of Vermont ought to be rebated to him, inasmuch as it was spent in opposing his own candidacy in favor of Charles D. Watson. It is a position decidedly odd in the political history of the country.

Taft and Wilson should vie with each other to see which can write the shorter speech of acceptance and still not sacrifice the value of their sayings. Comparatively few people will hear the spoken word, but several millions will read the printed word if the speech is of reasonable length. Therefore, if the candidates wish to reach the people they must be concise in their statements.

Although perhaps a mere coincidence, two alleged manslaughter cases arose right after Dr. Stone of the state laboratory expressed the opinion that the death sentence imposed on Arthur Rosworth had had a deterrent effect in Vermont, although it should be stated in this connection that the act which probably caused one of the deaths preceded by some weeks Dr. Stone's pronouncement. Still it was unfortunate for the effect of the expressed opinion.

When the valuation for taxation purposes is raised practically one-fourth, as in the case of Nashua, N. H., this year, one is apt to wonder if the assessors have been accustomed to do their full duty. And this illustration in Nashua is only one of a great many in the state of New Hampshire this year, under the guidance of the state administration. As a result of the marked changes, the tax rates in the several cities and towns have been much reduced, which, of course, has no direct effect on the comparative amounts that the taxpayers are required to pay, but which does make an attractive proposition to outside capital, which looks at the rate of taxation before considering anything else.

THE PROGRESSIVES CONVENTION.
In nominating a complete state ticket, choosing presidential electors and, in other ways, forming a distinct organization, the seventy men who gathered in Burlington yesterday under the banner of Theodore Roosevelt headed the best of their leader and cut loose from the Republican party. That best of Col. Roosevelt, set forth some time ago, following the Chicago convention, was "No compromise," no alliance with the opposition, no request for quarter and no bestowing of quarter. As far as the Republican party in Vermont is concerned, the Progressives carried out the program completely and are now in the field as a new party, but trusting, doubtless, to secure support from the Democratic party, as well as from the Republican party, from which it sprang. That such a course was the only thing for the Progressives to do is apparent, for they scarcely could expect anything from the Republican party organization in Vermont, either in the nature of a compromise or an alliance, holy or unholy. They had to go it alone or tamely submit to being smothered in the Republican party.

Some of the newspapers announced that "D. B. Francis" of Randolph was nominated for governor. That is a long ways from Rev. Fraser Metzger, so far, indeed, that one hardly would expect the telegraph to become so mixed on it. Although not well known throughout the entire state, Rev. Mr. Metzger has quite a wide acquaintance through eastern Vermont and particularly Windsor and Orange counties, where he is known as a capable preacher and active organizer, with a considerable interest in politics as a side issue. The nomination of him as the new party's candidate for governor is somewhat of a surprise, but the surprise is attended by the conviction that the Progressives selected a man in whose integrity of purpose one can place reliance.

"The Old Kent Road"—Mr. Van Dyke Brooke adds in this picture another very human characterization to his already admirable list. The "Old Kent Road" stand for a well defined station in life. Lowly it is; there's little room for vanity on the Old Kent Road. The old man and his family—Kate Price plays the mother; Miss Clara Kimball Young, plays Sue; Mr. Costello, plays Sue's costermonger sweetheart, Harry—were well content until he gets a legacy. He and the family move out of the "Road," and their moving out is worth seeing. He now thinks Harry isn't good enough for Sue. All this, as well as the train of circumstances that brought him back again to the "Old Road" and to the old simplicity of contentment, are told in a delightful way. We notice in the picture also, Chas. Eldridge, Robert Galland and Miss Adele de Garde.

If you can not read this print distinctly at a distance of fourteen inches from the eyes, you need glasses. Call and have your eyes examined and glasses made at King's Optical Parlor.

CURRENT COMMENT

Street Oiling.

The Springfield Reporter says: "The street-oiling is proving one of the greatest possible of local blessings. The money has been well expended, and, with the state aid promised, the appropriation for the purpose undoubtedly will accomplish considerably more than the most sanguine advocates of the improvement had anticipated. May there always be future provisions for all the road oil that the village needs!"

The dust affliction in Woodstock is doubtless just as severe as in Springfield, though Springfield claims, but not pridefully, to have been a banner town in that respect before her streets were becalmed with oil. The business section of Woodstock was oiled some weeks ago, and it is an unreasonable and daring person who will say that the innovation has not been completely successful from the viewpoint of comfort, cleanliness and health.

Oiling is more expensive than the time honored though nearly useless method of watering the streets, but there are few villages better able to have what is best, the safest and the cleanest for its health, comfort and pleasure, and there are few places of its size that have more automobile traffic, which makes dusty roads intolerable.—Woodstock Spirit of the Age.
